1

End those everyday frustrations

How many times do people spend longer trying to get information than the time they actually spend using it?

2

Routine tasks made intuitively simple

What if business software was as easy to handle as the apps we use on our phones?

3

The Access Workspace vision

With instant access to what you need, when you need it, productivity and achievement soar.

4

Work that doesn't feel like work

When business software feels good, you'll perform at your best and be free to do so much more.

End those everyday frustrations

At Access we promise our customers the freedom to do more. That means providing the most powerful and feature-rich software to expert users. At the same time, the software enables employees to gain fast, easy access to less complex but still important information.

We empower everyone in their work, lifting the burden of stifling admin. And putting an end to those everyday frustrations that together can make it hard to keep smiling.

How many times do people spend longer trying to get information than the time they actually spend using it?

The average business has over 30 different systems running. That's 30+ different passwords to forget. Worse, software is often installed in one department only – and jealously guarded – leaving others unable to get into it, or tempted to devise workarounds. Not good for any organisation's efficiency, alignment and control.

Routine tasks made intuitively simple

You're a salesperson wanting to know details about your customer – invoices paid, credit limits, etc. But you can't access the accounting system, so you have to ask someone in finance.

Multiply that by all your colleagues in the same fix and it's a wonder the finance team have any time to do their day job.

Cumbersome tasks that ought to be a breeze, siloed systems that erect unnecessary barriers – not nice

Cumbersome tasks that ought to be a breeze, siloed systems that erect unnecessary barriers – not nice. So, we asked: What if business software was as easy to handle as the apps we use on our phones, to do our banking, buy stuff or book a holiday?

Expense claims, purchasing requests, booking leave, all instantly approved without bottlenecks, bother or hassle. Shift handovers a thing of the past as the system automatically updates your colleagues, easily and simply. Dashboards with critical analytics at your fingertips, designed specifically for your role and needs. Routine tasks made as intuitively simple as a few clicks.

Now isn't that something to smile about?

What you need, when you need it

The brilliant thing about Access Workspace apps is that they cater precisely to the different needs of different users. While the system specialists in finance, HR or operations use the full functionality of the relevant software, others may only want a simple approval, a quick update, a single set of data, or a snapshot analysis.

But the specialist user doesn't want to field multiple minor queries. That's why we based our design thinking on a job role perspective, putting what each individual user needs to know – and no more – at their fingertips. If colleagues have regular requirements but don't need a full system, then we offer an app for that!

What you need, when you need it, quickly and easily

When we all have instant access to just what we need, when we need it – not burdened with more, not frustrated with less – then productivity and achievement soar.

When you don't need training to find what you need, because the design of the app is so intuitive, we naturally engage.

This is what Access Workspace delivers. Our unique platform integrates all Access software, works with a single data view and is available with a single sign-on.

Work that doesn't feel like work

Traditionally there are two types of software company. On the one hand: specialist providers of sophisticated, functionally rich, operationally specific software for power users and a single department's use. On the other: vendors of multiple software products, all on one common platform, but typically less powerful or functionally rich.

We don't ask you to choose. Access Workspace gives you the benefits of high-performance software together with the convenience of a single platform, plus quick and simple access to information right across your organisation.

Routine tasks made easy, and teams working the way they want to work.

Powerful Access functionality, routine tasks made easy, and teams working the way they want to work. Everyone's happy.

Freedom to do more

So, are you in a rut? Or in the groove? Does everything seem to take too long and it's hard to get things done? Or is everyone working happily and productively, feeling like they are really on a roll?

When business software feels this good, when it works the way you want to work, you're performing at your best and free to achieve so much more. With Access Workspace, you have more time for the job you are passionate about. More time to do more of what's important for you and your organisation.

And yes, more times when your software makes you smile.
